HEADS UPDATE

from Amanda Seager

Over the last couple of weeks I have been talking to the children in assemblies about our school vision. As a church school, we are expected to have a theologically rooted vision. Alongside this, as a school that is deeply committed to serving the whole of our school community, valuing the culture, beliefs, approach and background of every individual, we feel it is important that our vision reflects this. With this in mind, we decided upon the following as our vision for Trinity: 'We encourage one another and build each other up.'

For those of you who are interested in the Bible reference, this comes from 1 Thessalonians 5:11, and is from a letter that Paul wrote to the people of the church community he had established in the Greek city of Thessalonica. Thessalonica was a very diverse city and when Paul moved away to continue his work spreading the word of Jesus, the various groups began to favour their own interests and the harmony that had been created came under threat. This prompted Paul to write to them to encourage them to support each other and to value their differences. While the Bible story is not the most child-friendly (meaning we take great care in how and what we share from it with the children), we felt the sentiment fitted perfectly with what we want to achieve with the children during their time at Trinity.

The message we really want the children to take away from our vision is that we are a team at Trinity, we know that our differences make us stronger and better and that everyone has an important part to play. The vision links beautifully with our core values (curiosity, kindness, resilience, respect and teamwork), which the children know and demonstrate so incredibly well on a daily basis. We already see plenty of examples of how we live out our vision, children and adults alike, and I am sure this is only going to get even better in time.
