HEADS UPDATE

from Amanda Seager

The highlight of my week this week has to be Tuesday morning, which I spent visiting all of the classes and seeing the children engaged in their work and play. I was joined by an education consultant we have worked with at Trinity over a number of years, and our learning walk was following on from the staff training we had with the consultant in January, looking at ways we can encourage greater retention of learning.

In every class we saw children fully engaged in their tasks and we were pleased to see many of the strategies we had looked at on our training day being used. We saw a mixture of maths and English across the school and found children in all classes who could talk to us confidently about their learning. In some classes, the work was quite individual, for instance Year 4 children planning their own versions of a story they have been working on using fronted adverbials to add description and interest to their writing. In other classes, there was more of a collaborative approach, with children in Year 3 discussing which their best sentences were to be used in a shared, whole class piece of writing.

We saw children who were finding their learning hard, but who were also enjoying the challenge of that learning and demonstrating resilience, one of our school values. Everywhere we went, we saw adults and children really focused on learning and completely purposeful in what they were doing. It is always such a pleasure to see the school in action and I really wish it could be practical to share that with you as parents.

I hope you all have an enjoyable week next week and are able to have some quality time together as families. I know the holidays can be tricky to manage, especially for working parents, but I also know the children have worked hard this term and deserve a bit of a break for all their efforts.

M&S YoungMinds Young Designer Competition

Learn more and enter

This Children's Mental Health Week, we're calling on young people across the UK to get drawing and take part in M&S YoungMinds Young Designer competition – to design a new hoodie or sweatshirt – for the chance to have their design sold in M&S stores and online across the UK to support YoungMinds' work.

The new hoodie and sweater will go on sale to celebrate this year's Hello Yellow, when schools and communities come together on World Mental Health Day to show young people they're not alone with their mental health.
